Fourth Liberty Loan

The campaign for the Fourth Liberty Loan will begin Sept. 28, and closes Oct. 19. The result of the loan will be watched with keen interest in Europe, not only by our associates in war against the Teutonic powers, but by our enemies. It will be regarded by them as a measure of the American people's support of the war.

The Germans know full well the tremendous weight and significance of popular support of the war; of the people at home backing up the Army in the field. As the loan succeeds, our enemies will sorrow; as it falls short, they will rejoice. Every dollar subscribed will help and encourage the American soldiers and hurt and depress the enemies of America.

The loan will be a test of the loyaltyand willingness of the people of the United States to make sacrifices compared with the willingness of our soldiers to do their part. There must be and there will be no failure by the people to measure up to the courage and devotion of our men in Europe. Many of them have given their lives; shall we at home withhold our money? Shall we spare our dollars while they spare not their lives?

Last week's unprecedented rain about ruined the bean crop in the Carmel Valley, and much fruit and tomatoes were ruined. "At any rate," says one of the farmers, "we can look forward to a large hay crop."

Mrs. Hilda Hutchinson and family of Los Angeles arrived here on Monday. They will occupy the large White cottage for several weeks, perhaps months.

The Pacific Improvement Company's two motor launches, "Del Monte" and "Victor," have been beached near Pebble Beach, to undergo repairs.

Home and Business Destroyed

Pon Sing's observatory on the hill overlooking the town is no more. The laundry and home were totally destroyed by fire last Saturday morning.

Owing to the headway the flames had gained before the alarm was given, the Fire Department was unable to save the property. Adjoining sheds and fences were saved, however.

At present Pon Sing and his family are occupying a cottage on San Carlos avenue, provided by Mr. J. F. Deverdorf.

To enable the genial and hard-working Pon to re-establish his home and his business a subscription fund has been started. Contributions may be mae at the Pine Cone office.

FIGHTING WITH FOOD

By DR. RAY LYMAN WILBUR

President of Stanford University.

We made the French people cut their bread ration one-third a few days before the great German offensive began. That is what you and I did. And just stop for a minute and think what that means. We did that at a time when Germany was saying to France and England, "You had better compromise this thing. The Americans won't help you. They are a Nation of money grubbers; they won't wake up in time. They promised you airships. They promised you millions of men. They promised you ships. You had better compromise this matter and leave the Americans to us."

But France and England said, "No, no! The Nation that has sent the type of men that America has sent to France will never go back on them or go back on the soldiers and people fighting with those men."

That is the spirit we have put into this war. That is the spirit in these noble men who have gone to France, the men of the Army and the Navy. Faith in those men has given the people over there faith in us, so that they are willing to go on.

Russia's Downfall.

Let us turn for a minute and see why Russia went out of this war. Russia is a great country, larger than ours. Russia fought three years under bitter conditions. Russia, it is said, lost 5,000,000 dead and had millions wounded. Russia lost in one campaign as many in dead and wounded as we have sent to France due to the treachery of the Russian minister of war, but a Prussian agent. He sent those boys into traps to die, hundreds of thousands of them. Russia stood that. She had great reverses and great successes. She lost 1,500,000 prisoners. She fought on. And then last March she began to totter and then gradually to go down. First down came the Czar. Why? Because Russia began to starve. That is why.

The patient people stood in the streets of Petrograd in lines. The lines ended at the bakeshops. They stood all day long, and there was no bread at the end of the line. And then they gathered in the streets. They went right through the hotels clear to the roof, tore down the police, who had machine guns trained on the streets. They went over their dead comrades to do it. Men are all alike. Hungry men fight only for food. Revolutions are born in bread lines. Thus they brought down the Czar. Along came the first Republic, and they brought that down too. The army was not fed. They were easily the subjects of German propaganda.

Russia tottered out of the fight and left us to finish the job. Today there is famine in Russia. There are mobs in the streets of Petrograd. The people are scattering in the country. They hope to be fed. They are looking to Germany to arrange some kind of order, so they can get food.

The Fate of Finland.

Look at Finland. In November a representative of Finland came to us and said, "Are you going to let us have the wheat we bought from you? We have got to have it. There are 3,500,000 of us in Finland; our cereal crops are a failure. Our people are living on 150 grams of bread a day and mixing it with bark of trees and hay. We bought the wheat we needed in Russia, but the mobs took it off the trains in Petrograd and only a few loads got through. We bought wheat again in the United States, and bought it a third time in Canada to be safe.

"Now you stop the wheat we have bought over here and you stop the wheat we bought in Canada. Are you going to see the Finnish people go to death and destruction?"

And we had to say to them, "We do not even know whether the American people will save enough for the fighting troops and the millions back of those who are fighting with us. How can we help you? Perhaps we can give you oats."

Today Germany is organizing Finland.

Freedom's Darkest Hour.

One more incident. One day last winter Lord Rhondda received a cablegram from our Food Administration, saying, "We have sent you the last of the surplus wheat of the 1917 harvest. All the wheat we can send you from January to September must come from the savings of the American people. There will be none to send if they eat as they have done before."

Lord Rhondda laid down the paper. "The war is over," he said, "We are beaten."

But we reassured the British. "Hold on," we said, "America means business; we will save and send the wheat." What was done you all know. And by that we did more to make our credit good in Europe than by any other thing that has been done.

A French officer told us, "When my men heard that the Americans had sent their last surplus wheat, and that they were not on rations and that further shipments depended on their savings, they mutinied. The men said, 'We will go down into the sea and drown with the Sammies, we will go out in the trenches and die with the Sammies but, by God, we won't go on and fight when the American people have the food and eat it themselves and do not send it to us'."

Can you blame them? That is where we stand today.

Red Cross Notes

Herbert Hoover has asked the American Red Cross to collect 5000 tons of used clothing for the 10,000,000 people imprisoned in territory occupied by the germans. Do not repair garments. Destitute women by the thousands are eager to earn a small pittance by repairing them. Carmel people are requested to deliver garments at the Salvage Depot, Fifth and Dolores streets, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. Goods will be called for on notification if they cannot be delivered. Goods must be in Depot by Sept. 30.

The American Red Cross nurse means home and mother to the wounded soldier in the French base hospitals. He can talk to her—she understands him and his slang. Her training gives her the opportunity, her woman's tenderness the means, of helping to keep up the morale of our soldiers and sailors, and bring home closer to the boys.

"Soothing the Heart of Italy" is the title of a new Red Cross film which will be released shortly. It portrays the now historic expedition of the American Red Cross into Italy, and is vivid and very interesting.

Carmel chapter's latest shipment included 25 boys blouses, 1 aviator jacket, 1 pneumonia jacket.

The Red Cross and the Iron Cross are two symbols that mark the clearest division of forces in the world war now raging—one, a cross that stands for humanity; the other, a cross that glorifies brute force and put a premium on fiendishness.

WEEKLY GREETING

Autocracy is the form of government that prevails in hell. Any man who seeks to force unrighteous dominion upon his fellows is the devil's own agent.—Rev. James E. Talmage.

All Together

A really great demonstration of the American faculty to accomplish things quickly and thoroughly will be given in the Fourth Liberty Loan. Confronted with the necessity of raising a war loan of double the amount of its predecessors, we are called upon to complete the undertaking in twenty-one days—Sept. 28 to Oct. 19—and we will do it.

A new plan of partial payments has been adopted by the Treasury Department, which gives a better distribution than hertofore of the installments.

The initial payment will be 10 per cent; the second, Nov. 21, twenty per cent; the third, December 19, twenty per cent; the fourth, Jan. 16, twenty per cent, and the fifth and last, Jan. 30, thirty per cent.

Thus for a $50 bond you pay $5, $10, $10, $10, $15.

If you read it in the Pine Cone you may safely repeat it.

From November 11 to 18 the United War Fund drive will be made. In this one great drive for $170,000,000 the needs of the War Camp Community Service, Salvation Army, American Library Association, Knights of Columbus, and Jewish Welfare Society will be combined with the Red Cross and Y.M. and Y.W.C.A. needs.

A Wonderful Trip Graphically Described

By a Carmel Sojourner

Are we asleep? Do we realize that some of the most beautiful world scenery lies right around us? Would you see the mountains of Switzerland, or the famous Mediterranean drives of France or Italy once more? Then hie you to an auto, and sail, yes sail, up and down and over the mountain roads between Carmel-by-the-Sea and the famous Big Sur.

From the moment we leave the Highlands Inn gateway the sense of being at one with Nature comes upon us; at one with the road that skirts the cliff, no less than with the canyon below, radiant with color, opening a vista to the great sea. Down, down we go, the road narrowing into an old English lane, and we come upon the templed Colorado Canyon. Here the great redwoods vault into the sky, and the mysterious silences and columned heights bring back memories of Egypt's pillared temples.

Up, up a mile or two we climb, our noses ever pointed to the sky. Then down we swoop, and, winding in and out, touched by the brilliant colors of the Canyon of Rocky Creek, we again begin our ascent, and with a sense of aeroplaning, not of motoring, we reach another summit. And such a view—tremendous, sublime! A point of land with the coast stretching for miles to the right and left, islands dotting the surface here and there; an abalone fisherman is diving for shell food, and as we watch him, we recall the pearl divers of the Orient. Back of us great storm clouds envelop the majestic range of mountains that unfold one by one; and then for miles great redwood giants tell their tales of antiquity and strength of primeval days. A splendid canyon lies at our feet, and two thousand feet below a silver ribbon winds its way through shaded glens and loses itself in the great sea.

In Japan such a spot would be crowned with a resting-place, where the Traveler and Nature-lover might enjoy the strength of such a scene, and allow its beauty to sink deep into the soul.

We hugged the side of the cliff in our descent to the ranch house below, where we ordered dinner to be served on our return. We again motored many miles through redwood canyons, with ever a noisy brook singing its song of trout hidden in its crystal depths.

As we neared another summit, the granite peak of Pico Blanco rose 4000 feet from the variegated floor. The passenger from Chili exclaimed, "The Andes! Oh, it is the great Andes of South America!" And our visitor from the Alpine Club, who had just returned from a tour to its top, compared it with other great views in California—superb beyond compare.

We skirt the top of the world; on and on, through canyons, redwoods, mountains, fording rivers in high glee, we reach the Little Sur River. Later the picturesque light-house comes within our view, and we at last reach the Big Sur, or Big South, River. Returning an hour later, we are back in the valley of wonders, where dinner was awaiting us, and such a chicken dinner we had! fruit and corn and berries fresh from the garden of our host.

This is the place where one finds the genuine cowboy—eight of them returning from a round-up, with chaps, sombrero, lariet and silvered Mexican bit. Where the auto could not go, the saddle-horse carried us. And now we know where the hidden houses of the old lime kiln are to be found, and where to stand to cast for finest mountain trout, and—hush! just where to find that lost three-pounder that always gets away.

Encircling mountain heights, the soft misty fogs hanging about their peaks, the great trees ever mirrored in the graceful stream, the watercress fringing hidden pools—all made a picture from which it was hard to turn away. But the sun was fast sinking behind the wonder point a mile above us, and we relinguished our horses to our host and made start for home.

Upon reaching the rim of the canyon we saw below us a deserted mining camp—a whole village, as silent as the grave—the smelter, the hotel, the village store, all there—just life gone forth, and where? The setting sun fingered its deserted windows with golden light; a door seemed to open, and in its shadow stood a woman; who was she? Ah, that's another story; but it is included in the tales of the day, of a trip that may be, should be, taken by every visitor and resident in Carmel, Carmel the Witch.
